Woodhenge has been an iconic part of the Beehive, for children and parents alike, for over 30 years. Built in the early 80's by a group of parents, the structure was the crown jewel of the playground. Countless children have played on its beams, wobbled the bridge and attempted daring speeds down the fireman’s pole…it was almost a rite of passage…when you were big enough to conquer Woodhenge!

Over the years many repairs and replacements were conducted on sections of the structure, it was affected by weather and white ants, but yet it stood. The addition of the yellow spiral added to the challenge and children of all ages enjoyed the physical challenge of descending one loop at a time. It provided shade for summer play in the sandpit and places to escape during a game of chasey. Woodhenge had everything.

The cycle of life inevitably comes to an end though and all things must return to the earth. Woodhenge saw its last playtime, heard its last laughter and said goodbye to the Beehive.

To commemorate this structure the McCarthy family commissioned a portrait of Woodhenge to be donated to the school, so all those who enjoyed it could continue to remember the laughter and challenge of playing on its beams.

Memory of Woodhenge by Ross Potter, now hangs in the office for all to continue to enjoy as the years go by.
